Definitions in all clues are normal, but you must count on a knowledge of French and German (as well as English) to determine a number of letters missing from their wordplay (in two cases twice). All solutions are too long for their allotted grid spaces, so the missing letters must be entered figuratively.

Deadline for entries is 23:59 GMT on Saturday 4 July. You need to register once and then sign in to theguardian.com to enter our online competition for a £100 monthly prize.
