

Report 1: Balanced reporting

Protestors remove slave holder statue

Protestors at an anti-racism demonstration pulled down a statue of Edward Colston in Bristol yesterday because of his involvement in the slave trade.

The statue of Edward Colston on Colston Avenue in Bristol

Protestors dumping the statue in Bristol Harbour

Joel, a protestor, said: "Things need to change. We should not have statues in city centres of people who enslaved thousands of black men, women and children."

Bristol's mayor commented: "There's a lot of excitement among many people that the statue has been pulled down."